

Guilty

A Wilmington juvenile was sentenced to one year's probation Monday after being found guilty in Woburn Court on burglary charges.

The youth was apprehended by an Andover Street resident at 2 a.m. on September 17 in the livingroom of his home.

According to police, the resident and his wife were awakened by noises coming from somewhere in the house. The resident investigated, discovered the intruder and called the police.

Police say they believe the juvenile entered the home through a cellar window.

During questioning, he also confessed to other burglarious incidents, police said.

Disco

There is a change in dance lessons being offered by the Recreation Department this year.

Instead of ballroom dancing receiving top billing as it has for the past five years, this year disco seems to be the "in" thing to do.

Currently there are seven dance classes meeting weekly in the North Intermediate School cafeteria: four adult disco, two teen disco and one adult ballroom.

Recreation Director Ron Swasey says he isn't too surprised at this relatively sudden change in popularity. While ballroom dances will always have their traditional supporters and importance as part of our social activities, he said, the disco phenomenon has scored big lately with movies and record albums like John Travolta's Saturday Night Fever."

Swasey said he enjoys the changes that people show in their recreational preferences. "If everyone wanted the same thing year in and year out our overall program would become stagnant," he said.

New dance classes will begin again sometime in November. In the past five years, over 600 Wilmington couples have enrolled in the 10-week programs, Swasey said.

The best part of the whole thing, according to Swasey, is that the program doesn't cost the town a cent it's self supporting.

With the new Regional Health Center in Wilmington nearly ready to open, the office, long located in the MacDougall home, has been moved into the new facility. With her office still in boxes and confusion, Phyllis Trefry was busy on Monday typing cards to notify people that the address is now 500 Salem St., Wilmington. The center, officials said, will be open soon, but the date is not yet known.

Fire claims vacant home

Wilmington firefighters responded to a blaze Sunday morning in a vacant home on Broad Street.

Open

soon

The fire, which was termed "of suspicious origin" by Deputy Chief Wandell took over an hour to quell.

Responding were engines one and two, ladder one and cars 20 and 28. According to Deputy Chief Wandell, windows, doors and the cement block foundation of the wood frame strucRaucci of 425 North Street in Tewksbury.

The fire is currently under investigation by the Wilmington police and fire departments and by the state Fire Marshall's office.

On Saturday, the fire department responded to eight separate calls for brush fires. One, at the end of Kendall Street, took more than five hours to

Old bakery scene of second fire

The ramshackle structure on Salem Street which once housed the town Bakery was the scene of the second fire in less than three weeks Saturday. At approximately 11:10 p.m. firefighters responded to a call to contain a blaze at that address with engines one and two and Car 20.

Deputy Fire Chief Dan Wandell reported that the fire was confined to a small section in the middle of the building and the roof directly above it. It was, he said, probably set by arsonists.

Last week a notice of violation was issued to the building's owners Harry and Helen Cheifitz.

Building inspector Charles Lawrenson, contacted by the Town Crier, said he would be talking with the Clerk of the Woburn District Court on Tuesday to see what could be done about the structure, since he had had no response from the property's owners. At least two firefighters have been injured, one seriously, while fighting fires at that address in the past few years. In addition, the building is open and unstable, according to Deputy Chief Wandell, and poses a hazard for neighborhood children.

Special Education discussed at School Committee meeting

by Elaine DePasquale A blessed event delayed debate on Wilmington High School's open campus at the School Committee meeting last week, but a discussion of new and costly Chapter 766 regulations gave the meeting substance anyway.

At the meeting it was announced that Committeeman Phil Fenton could not be present because his wife had just given birth to a 6 pound 13 ounce baby girl.

Several teachers and high school administrators were on hand hoping for a chance to discuss Fenton's motion of three weeks ago which directed the School Committee to come up with plans to limit the open campus situation. However, because of Fenton's known interest in the subject, the Committee decided to table the discussion. October 25 was suggested as a suitable time to proceed on the matter.

Also at the meeting, Special Education Director Cleo Eredette presented his department's quarterly report. October 4 was set aside as the date to hear the Teachers' Association grievance which resulted from a new annual reposting of coaching positions; and October 11 was earmarked for a presentation on recommendations for school use in the face of declining enrollments.

In his report, Fredette outlined several new regulations which have become part of Chapter 766, a state law requiring school systems to provide youngsters with equal educational opportunities regardless of handicaps. One in particular, he would require principals to be chairmen of their own buildings, and counselors, reading teachers and school nurses to become involved in the re-evaluations of youngsters in their particular buildings.

The only drawback to this approach, Fredette said, is that it could take away from time spent on regular education.

The third option would be a combination of the first two. It would call for the hiring of only certain types of staff persons. For example, Fredette said, the School Department might hire a psychologist and a reading specialist, but require school nurses to make home visits and school principals to be chairmen of their buildings.

Fredette said he has met with principals once already and will be meeting with them again to explore the options before deciding which direction to pursue.

Another costly program which has been mandated by the State of Massachusetts, Fredette said, is a campaign called "Child Fund."

In Wilmington, as in other communities, some children have been discovered over the years who have never attended a school of any kind.

"We have found youngsters as, old as 12 who have never gone to school a day in their lives," said Pierce. Two such youngsters were discovered only last year. They are now enrolled in special education classes and are receiving instruction.

"I think there is a need for this type of program" said Fredette. He addspecial education, 13.1 per cent, is high, Fredette admitted. He said, however that he would not be unduly concerned unless it continued to climb.

Yet, as a foil against the possibility of upwardly spiralling referrals, he suggested to the School Committee that Management Process Workshop be held sometime this year. Its purpose, he said, was to explore "what a school system can do out of context of special education in terms of meeting youngsters needs and holding down 766 costs."

According to Fredette, the workshop, which will be run by Dr. Charles Claymon of Lesley College, will seek to establish a variety of options for principals, such as tutoring or greater use of parent and retiree volunteers with an eye to holding down special education referrals.

Fredette said he is planning to write ' a grant to attract funding for the project. ''Some new money has recently become available,'' he said.

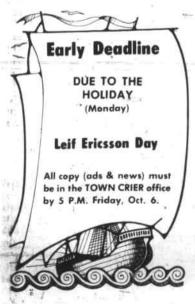

In other business, the Committee accepted the registration of Shawsheen School sixth grade teacher George Paras who is leaving to accept a principal's post at a New Hampshire school. They also set aside part of the October a meeting to interview the single candidate who has applied for the position of Data Processing Director.

"It seems to make sense to act rather soon on this," said Pierce, "so we can work closely with Westinghouse to avoid a catastrophic situation in 1979 with regard to scheduling. Because Timeshare, the firm originally hired to provide software for the school's computer, withdrew unexpectedly from its contract, the school department reverted in part to a prior arrangement they had with Westinghouse According to Pierce, the school department is committed to Westinghouse for two years for attendance and report cards. In addition, Westinghouse did classroom scheduling for this year. Pierce said he would like to see dual systems. Wilmington's and Westinghouse's run by January, 1979, to get the kinks out of the new software program.

Firefighters attribute part of the reason for the fires to a recent dry spell, prior to Sunday's rainstorm.

Conservation approval needed

Earlier this year the Housing Authority was granted initial approval for funding for 25 units of federally-subsidized family housing.

The Authority has recently received an invitation to re-apply to the state for 110 units of housing for the elderly. -Hooper said the Housing Authority would follow through on this, although under the Dukakis administration they were twice refused.

It would take at least 200 units, he said, to fill the needs of all the elderly citizens in Wilmington.

This was a new requirement that every student in the program receive a full core re-evaluation every three years.

Currently, the Special Education Department holds annual program reviews. Only in situations where a youngster's program has undergone a drastic change is re-testing needed. This amounts to re-testing approximately 50 to 75 youngsters a year, said Fredette.

Under the new regulation all of the youngsters in special education programs (currently 641 or 13.1 per cent of the total school population) must be retested every three years. To comply with this regulation, 250 students must be re-evaluated this year, said Fredette, plus another 160 by 1981.

According to Fredette, there are three directions the School Department may take in dealing with the new requirements. The most expensive would entail hiring another central core team such as the one Wilmington now has, which is made up of a chairman, a nurse, a reading specialist and a psychologist. According to Superintendent of Schools Walter Pierce, hiring another complete team would mean the expenditure of another $75,000 in salaries. Another option, Fredette said, would be to "de-centralize" the entire re-evaluation process. This, he said, would be the most cost effective. It ed, however, that he believed most of the responsibility for running the program should belong to the state Department of Education and not to the individual cities and towns.

The program, as mandated by the state, directs the cities and towns to conduct a media campaign to insure that the community understands the services available under the special education law. The towns are also required to reproduce and distribute leaflets with the same purpose.

Fredette said he expects to seek help from members of the seven-town SEEM collaborative and from members of a new, system-wide Parent Advisory Council now being formed to provide input on issues relating to special needs youngsters.

A change will also be effected, Fredette said, in the present method for handling "speech therapy only" cases. Because the present informal method is not in compliance with the letter of the law, new procedures must be established with individual parents' meetings and home notifications.

In order to do this, Fredette said, the present third grade screening process must be eliminated and children with speech difficulties will be strictly on a referral basis.

Although enrollments throughout the system as a whole are declining, Fredette said, enrollments under special education are actually increasing. The current percentage of the school population involved in

Slow down

A new safety officer and a repaired radar set might mean a new way of driving in Wilmington.

Officer Robert Shelley has said that he will be enforcing the speed limits within the town. While his objective may not be to issue any particularly great number of tickets, he said that, if he has to he will. His purpose is to have people drive slower on the streets of Wilmington.

Shelley has also said that the Registry of Motor Vehicles will be cooperating in his drive against speeding. Motorists should not be surprised to find Registry inspectors manning radar traps in Wilmington. If you want to meet Officer Shelley, just try driving fast on the streets of Wilmington. Gentleman that he is, he will very politely tell you to slow down. He may even give you a ticket. He means business.

But, have you really read some of these pot of gold documents? The one we got in the mail last week It was for accident and health. The first paragraph read:

"You are not covered for resulting loss from self-inflicted injuries, or suicide (there's a difference?) motorcycling, professional athletics, act of war, military service, travel other than as a fare-paying passenger on a commercial airline, speed contests, injuries or accidental death for which Workmen's Compensation or any Employer's Liability Act is payable. illegal occupation, intoxication, hernia or use of narcotics unless on the advice of a physician. The term 'hospital does not include mental institutions, Christian Science Facilities or U.S. Government hospitals." That doesn't leave much. So when you take out an insurance policy, it pays to check carefully.

A new wrinkle in insurance is the cancer policy.

Many cancer-ridden patients feel they can find payments for their illness or operations. Yes...Until...

You read further and see the column that asks you to check off certain items. One of these that is advertising cancer aids, always shows cancer, nervousness, and a few others, so that the only one who can be eligible for these policies is one who is 100 per cent perfect.

The insurance racket is so universal, that in the TV program, "60 Minutes" the staff spoke on the insurance policies instituted by some insurance for the elderly. Some people may have been hoaxed into buying policies that, when they try to collect on some ailments or illnesses, they find that they are out of luck.

This all started about, my discussing consumers and insurance, by an incident when first I visited a five-and dime store in the Redstone Plaza.

abit of visitin

looked at the one marked with the quarter off. It, too, said the same price. So I thought I'd have a little fun with the "green" cashier, someone about 17 who needed a job. I mentioned to her about the two shaving cream articles. She paused, hemmed and hawed. I asked for the manager. He came over and told me that all prices were equal to the same, but when I persisted, he said that I was wrong, and both cans were 99¢. I ask-ed how about the quarter off? He got surly and told me that if I didn't want to buy the shaving cream, I didn't have to purchase it.

So, again I went to another store, this time a supermarket, found them excellent. One clerk had accidently marked the wrong price on an item. I told the clerk that some items were marked incorrectly. I got the item for the lower marked price. The clerk probably got the gate.

Then in Tewksbury I saw another store with the marked down prices. Ah, I thought, here I have Crest toothpaste for $1.09 and another with a sign 25 cents off. That means I get this one for 84 cents, right? Wrong. When I brought it to light the clerkcashier, again the pause, the indecision, the hemming and hawing, and again "may I see the manager?

He came over, I had the two tubes. He also remarked that all products come into the store marked with a discount price. Hmmmmm...I've checked other stores, and found the toothpaste selling for less. So that was wrong. So he got rather snippy (whatever happened to that old adage about the customer always being right?) and my Polish stubbornness came to the fore.

I wrote to the State Consumer's Council, got a short note that they were looking into my complaint. I didn't get far with them either. They probably figured here's some jerk from Tewksbury (where is that anyhow?), probably a hippy, trying to make fun of us.

I got a note later on from the state advising me that the store had told them that all of their products come in with the adage that all prices are the same, and that with their discounts (there is no such animal) as so much off an item. So they got the old shill treatment.

The store has lost a customer...me...and they wonder why certain stores lose business Blame it on the managers who should be taking courses on dealing with the public. Most are just average, working for small pay, but there are some, even with the small pay, who are striving for a future, and do have loyalty to their businesses. Let the buyer beware !!!

Conservative majority, liberal victory

by William C. Sawyer assisted by Joan N. Gardner In a primary election with national significance, the voters of the Fifth Congressional District have chosen two liberal candidates to oppose each other in the general election, but have done so in the face of a clear expression by the voters that they wanted a conservative alternative. How this could happen - and why the voter sometimes feels frustrated as a result - it is not a simple story, but worth the time to tell. In the process we'll learn something about what media are effective and what makes winning campaigns.

The Fifth Distifict resembles the country as a whole in its voter makeup and in the diversity of the communities within its border. Party registrations - 42 per cent Democratic, 18 per cent Republican and 40 per cent unenrolled at the last presidential election - are within a percentage point or two of those for the nation. Included within the district are urban, suburban, intellectual and rural communities, representative of these types of communities nationally.

For nearly 100 years the district was represented by a, Republican Congressman, despite an overwhelming preponderance of Democratic registrations - until 1974 when the liberal Democrat, Paul Tsongas, won the seat. "But in June of this year, Paul Tsongas decided to run for the Senate, creating an open seat. Had-the District turned liberal - or could it be recaptured by a conservative - Republican or Democrat? Would the national swing toward conservatism control the primary - or would the candidates, their campaigns and the issues lead to a different result?

The principal candidates represented the full political spectrum, from conservative to liberal. They all agreed that the principal issues were taxes and inflation. Their problem was to distinguish themselves from the crowd in a way that would capture the voters attention and their support.

At the outset, there were four principal Democratic candidates, John Markey, Jim Shannon, Ray Rourke and Mike McLaughlin. John Markey is a 31-year-old assistant U.S. attorney with no prior political experience, and residence in Lawrence of only a few weeks before the campaign began. Jim Shannon, a life-long Lawrence resident, an attorney for a short period of time, and 26 years of age, had the political experience and contacts of a close election effort two years before against a long-time state Senator to assist him. The third was Ray Rourke, the "mayor" of Lowell, in political life for 30 years and a 60-year old conservative. The fourth is Mike McLaughlin, a Middlesex County Commissioner, and a former selectman and state representative, who might have been the strongest candidate of all, but became involved in a grand jury proceeding involving his duties as County Commissioner, and though he was not a subject of the investigation, could not effectively throw off the cloud of the investigation cast over his campaign. A fifth candidate. Bob Hatem, is a Lowell resident, with strong business associations in Lawrence, in the middle in age on the issues, who was not considered a serious candidate when he started his campaign in mid-August.

Markey, Shannon and Rourke each had a different kind of campaign - each typical of its type - and each characterized and determined by a fundamental decision made at the start from which all of their other campaign decisions followed. Rourke was well-known in Lowell, the largest city in the district, but Markey and Shannon were both relatively unknown residents of Lawrence, the smaller of the two cities. Consequently. Markey and Shannon had the initital problem of gaining name recognition. Shannon's campaign decided at the outset to wage an issues campaign featured by outspoken hard liberal positions on key or catchy issues, the theory being to offer the voter a choice based on clear distinctions between himself and the other candidates. The fist six weeks of his campaign were spent recruiting the community leaders and political activists in the Lawrence area and the southern liberal towns - an effort to recruit those people at the top of the political apparatus who would be attrracted by ideology and positions on the issues and who would bring with them an existing organization.

His media effort centered on newspaper ads, and handouts, where issues could be presented. His newspaper campaign began in August, became more intense after Labor Day and ended the day before the primary. He used the two local dailies and the important weeklies in the district, especially the weekly serving the southern towns. On the last day of the cam paign, he took a half page ad in the Boston Globe. His campaign targeted carefully and spent little effort in Lowell. His budget was in the area of $90,000. The Markey campaign, on the other hand, determined early that their major effort would be to build name recognition and an image of the candidate as a tool to demonstrate something about the candidate. This decision led him to early use of the media - starting with newspapers - and the recruitment of a large, grass roots, young and enthusiastic organization, well directed at the top, but without much experience in the ranks - and ending with a major television effort. where imagery can be well presented, but where there is not enough time for issues. He also took a major ad in The Boston Globe on the last day before the Primary, but between a burst of newspaper ads in mid-August and the last, his newspaper program was almost nil. Typical of Markey's campaign was its effective use of campaign workers standing by major highways during "drivetime." holding Markey signs, waving and smiling. These "living billboards" were eventually copied by many other candidates, but as with much of his campaign, this tool familiarized the voter with his name in a pleasant and effective way, but did not give the voter a reason to vote for him. That was left to some other time and media And, as a further characteristic of such a campaign, in his personal statements. Markey tended to straddle on the issues. He did not concentrate his efforts as much as Shannon in his targeted towns, but tried to be effective district-wide, even in Lowell. His budget was approximately $110,000, the largest of all of the candidates, but relatively modest as Congressional campaigns go. Markey's brother, the Congressman representing an adjacent district, helped substantially in raising funds and organizational support from outside the district.

Chelmsford. His principal strategy was to concentrate his activity in the Lowell area, expending little effort elsewhere, the theory being that his efforts would yield the most is spent in this way. His media program consisted almost entirely of newspaper ads and handouts. He did not run as many ads as Shannon or Hatem and again - centered his effort in the Lowell area.

Bob Hatem's campaign began slowly, had little organization at the start and was not taken seriously by the other candidates for weeks into the campaign. He concentrated his effort in Lawrence and Lowell and their surrounding towns. His organization elsewhere never seemed to materialize.

Mike McLaughlin's campaign was stopped in its tracks by the grand jury episode and did not begin to move again until two weeks before the primary. Whatever his original media plan may have been, his first newspaper ads did not appear until the week before the primary, and thereafter they were few in number. His campaign in the end rested in his name recognition because of his past political activities and his image as it existed.

The Republicans fielded two candidates. Dr. Nick Rizzo is a 65-year-old psychiatrist from Andover, conservative and new to the political scene. The other was John Buckley, 49 years old, liberal, the incumbent sheriff of Middlesex County and until May a gubernatorial candidate

Throughout the month of August and into the first week of September, the polls showed Rourke, Shannon and Markey to be the frontrunners - each with about 17 per cent of the Democratic and Independent votes. With 10 days to go before the primary, McLaughlin stood at 13 per cent and Hatem at seven per cent. At this late hour, 30 per cent of the voters were still undecided.

During the last 10 days, each of the principal candidates put on his maximum media efforts. Shannon, Markey, Rourke and Buckley received their share of newspaper endorsements and Shannon's campaign appeared to gain momentum.

Shannon had run a modest newspaper campaign through August, but beginning seven days before the primary he went to a daily series of major ads in the local dailies, and one in all the major weeklies. The ads were different in theme and were directed toward specific target towns. In his ads, brochures and statements, he persisted in his hard issues campaign. Two of these ads attacked Markey's recent residence in the district. In midweek two well-known liberal politicians, Congressman Harrington and state Senator Atkins, endorsed Shannon, an endorsement that was the subject of a direct mail piece to the southern towns where Atkins was best known. These endorsements, and an endorsement by The Boston Globe, were proof of the effectiveness of his campaign at reaching the liberal activists.

The Markey campaign sensed Shannon's growing strength among the liberal voters he too was trying to reach and attempted to become more issue-oriented, but with a media effort still consisting almost wholly of television, supported only by handouts, the change in emphasis was hard to get across. One half of Markey's $40,000 television effort was spent during this period - with, we will see, little effect. - +

Lawrence. His ads were not as polished as those of some of the others, but they were direct, easily read, carefully targeted and very effective. Bob Hatem was an easy, mature, likeable and moderate candidate. He never generated much of an organization, but with the ad program, supported by his personal appearance, he succeeded in achieving a remarkable result, and in knocking Rourke out of the race.

When the votes were finally counted, the youngest and most radical candidate. Jim Shannon, won with only 23 per cent of the votes, narrowly beating Ray Rourke by 700 votes or less than one percentage point. Bob Hatem, who started at 7 per cent in the polls 10 days earlier, came in third with 19 per cent of the votes, while Markey who came in fourth stayed at 17 percent. Shannon proved the most effective in consolidating his base in Lawrence and reaching the liberals, activists and party regulars in the principal southern towns, but had it not been for Hatem's remarkable drive at the end, Shannon's 23 per cent would not have been enough, for it was the large Hatem vote. drawn primarily from Rourke's constituency, that prevented Rourke from achieving the vote he had expected.

On the Republican side, the two candidates ran a very quiet race. Of all the candidates in the field, John Buckley had the highest recognition factor and coasted on that with very little organizational or media effort. Rizzo, a relative unknown, but conservative did surprisingly well, capturing 46 per cent of the Republican vote. This can be interpreted as either a disappointing showing for Buckley or the result of conservatives running in other statewide races. What is certain is that the Democrats were once again allowed a monopoly on the excitement and interest of a primary race. John Buckley will have to overcome the position and attention Shannon has gained in the minds of the voters and the fact that he does not live in the district - and he will have to give most Independents and many Democrats a reason to vote for him in November... if he is going to win. Eight-two thousand Democrats voted in the primary. Only about 13,000 Republicans did.

But what do we learn from all this? First, the results confirm that, in spite of a liberal winning, there is a conservative trend running, even in the Fifth District. The three conservative Democratic candidates received 56.1 per cent of the vote and the two liberal candidates, Shannon and Markey, received 39.3 per cent. The results also confirm that in a divided field a well targeted and executed issues campaign that risks offending many but is presented by an attractive candidate can succeed - even if he is a liberal bucking a conservative trend. Further, the results show that television by itself, and without effective newspaper support and a substantial presentation of the issues, is not likely to win, even if the candidate is an attractive one, such as Markey. And finally, the results show that an attractive candidate, with an effective media campaign, can successfully appeal to the voters without an extensive organization - and without any paid television. The voter is smarter than many think

Ray Rourke continued to stay home. His campaign produced an excellent brochure and a modest newspaper effort, but no strong effort was made outside of the Lowell area, where he believed he would be most effective

It was Bob Hatem who proved to be the decisive factor. Beginning 11 days before the primary and intensifying during the last week, the Hatem campaign put on the most extensive, coherent and continuous newspaper ad campaign of all of the candidates - with its greatest concentration being in Lowell and It means that a small minority of the voters have chosen two liberal candidates for the November election - one being the most radical of all the candidates and this has been done in the face of a vote clearly indicating the preference by a majority of the voters for a moderate or conservative candidate. It is true that this is always a possibility in a multi-candidate race but it is also true that the result is bound to leave the voters feeling impotent, frustrated and a little angry. It is no wonder that the voter wants to take things into his own hands by voting for measures like Proposition No. 13, that give him some measure of control, despite his elected representatives.

So you think your kids are going to college?

Think again.

Right now, four years in a private college cost about thirty thousand dollars or more. Within 10 years it'll cost close to sixty thousand. And state colleges will be close behind. If you've got two kids... you're talking one hundred twenty thousand dollars.

Now, if that doesn't shock you, you'd better sit down for this one: Economists figure the costs of an average home will be about the same...one hundred twenty thousand.

Maybe you haven't faced it yet, but it looks like many of us are going to have to make a choice - that house we've dreamed of, or a college education for our kids.

tion Advance Fund. It's simple. It works. And it can be put into action within two years.

It works like this: after the freshman year, your son or daughter will be able to get a cash advance from the federal government for tuition and room and board at the college they're attending. Up to the full amount needed. This money will be paid back after graduation - by the graduate - at a rate of two percent of their income per year, through U.S. Government payroll deductions.

The graduate never repays more than he can afford. Payments go up only when earnings do. The government always gets its money back. And you don't have to make that dreadful choice between a new home or mortgaging your present home, and your children's future. This Tuition Advance Fund program is already on its way in Congress. With your vote, I'll be there to make sure it goes all the way.

MVC picks Early showdown-Dracut vs Chelmsford

by Rick Cooke The Merrimack Valley Conference showdown comes early this year with the Dracut Middies travelling to Chelmsford to take on the Lions in a game that could determine the conference champ in just the third week of the MVC season. Both teams have two easy wins apiece under their belts and the confrontation should be a dandv. Last year Dracut nipped the Lions 7-0 in a surprising defensive struggle. This year both teams are capable of scoring points early and often.

Tewksbury has its annual "Homecoming Game" this week against the always scrappy Billerica Indians who have ridden the roller coaster thus far this season - topping Ipswich 19-8 before falling to Dracut 20-6 and nipping Lawrence Central Catholic last week 13-12.

The Redmen offense continued to struggle last week at Methuen and it will be the key to making this game a happy homecoming for coach Bob Aylward's young team - who find themselves in much the same situation that Wilmington was in a year ago - young talented offensive backs who will naturally make mistakes while learning the varsity ropes.

The Wildcats may be on the verge of turning the corner if they can avoid the key mistakes on defense and score some points early. The WHS offense can be one of the top crews in the conference.

They'll get a chance to make that first turn Saturday when they host the Methuen Rangers - who have already come around the bend and appear headed for MVC respectability.

The other conference games this week pit Andover against struggling Austin Prep and Central Catholic against the Lawrence Lancers at the Lancers' gridiron.

Last week's record (including a right-on-the-nose job in the 21-14 Andover win) was a mediocre 3-2. This week's MVC picks:

Tewksbury 14-Billerica 12....I've got to believe that the Redmen offense will stop making the big mistake that leads to the disappointing loss. The team didn't run the ball well at all last Saturday in Methuen and that is the key to any offense with the exception being Andover who seems to be able to get away with a poor running game. It would help if Tewksbury can get Paul Weitz and Dave Puzzo healthy again. The way the offense is playing the tendency is to look for Tewksbury to play conservative, bang-away-at you football, but a team can't do that without a good ground game and the Redmen haven't shown that they can control the football at all this year.

The Indians haven't been much better however, turning over the ball at an alarming rate. That could be a plays the run decently. If TMHS quarterback Dennis Vecchi has a good day Tewksbury will win. I think the offensive backfield will turn things around for Tewksbury. Better blocking in the offensive line would help the running cause also. A few of those early season problems just might come together this week in Tewksbury

Wilmington 21-Methuen 8....I question as to whether the Rangers are a legitimate MVC contender. For three quarters against Tewksbury Methuen was making the same mistakes on offense that go hand in hand with being a second division club. Only when the Tewksbury offense decided to match the Rangers turnover for turnover did Methuen take advantage of the good field position - largely due to the outside bursts of Kevin Tarr who still doesn't have a good sense of how the game should be played. He's a burner however and if he gets the play straight in the huddle and the pitch from erratic quarterback Kevin Bradley is on target - look out. Fullback Ron McGrath is also a decent banger for Methuen.

The defense played a tough game against Tewksbury a week ago, but the Wildcats have more firepower than the Redmen-namely receiver, Dave Woods and halfback Chris Briggs who have teamed with quarterback John Robarge to give WHS an offense that was non-existent in many games last year.

If the WHS defense can force the big Methuen turnover then the offense could put some points on the board early against a defense that isn't as strong as it looked against Tewksbury last Saturday.

Chelmsford 14-Dracut 8.... The stingy Lion defense will be put to the test in this one. The Middles have some weapons with halfbacks Dave Nicholaou and Ron Monbleau leading the artillery.

The Lions have ripped two weak opponents by a whopping 73-7 count while Dracut has yet to be tested in games against Billerica and Lawrence. This is the first real test for either club and the winner could emerge as an early favorite to run away and hide in the race for the conference crown.

Andover 38-Austin Prep 6... The Cougars will score their first touchdown of the season after 21-0, 20-0 and 42-0 blankings. Either Manny Silva or Tom Walsh should riddle the Cougar secondary with pinpoint passing. The Golden Warriors probably won't have to go to the ground much at Austin Prep.

Central Catholic 21-Lawrence 16,...Central Catholic has disappointed with an 0-2 start after high

Andover passing attack tips Wildcats, 21-14

The Andover Golden Warriors seem to have a knack for coming up with points in a hurry via the pass. Last year it was a 51 yard Dan Welch to Rick Collins touchdown bomb striking down the Wildcats 14-10 with one second on the clock.

Warriors wipe out 14-0 lead

This season it was the Warriors' lethal air game that sent the spirited but inexperienced Wilmington defense down to defeat again as the home club erased 14-0 WHS lead with 15 fourth quarter points that included a 20 yard pass to Paul Farnham from reserve quarterback Tom Walsh with 21 seconds left to play.

Walsh, who had beaten Tewksbury a week before with his pinpoint passing to Farnham, came off the bench after starter Manny Silva (sore shoulder) was rushed hard and dumped by a Wildcat defense that limited Andover to nine yards rushing in 21 attempts but was burned by a passing game that went 21 for 33 and helped give the winners 278 yards total offense.

The Cats went with a three man defensive front, putting eight men back to protect against the Warriors' perennially strong passing attack. The absence of defensive back Dave Ballou, who is sidelined with mononucleosis, hurt the Cat defensive backfield where inexperience was a factor according to assistant coach Jim Gillis who went into the game with the confidence that his defensive team "had everything covered."

"It isn't like we didn't have the people there," mentioned Gillis after the game. The Wilmington defensive line coach admitted that inexperience affected the Wildcats as the game got down to the nitty-gritty of the fourth quarter. "We always had two or three kids around the ball," added a disappointed Gillis.

> effort that was picked up considerably by the fact that the offense put a first half touchdown on the board and scored again in the third stanza to take a surprising 14-0 lead before the devensive corps were thin against the pass

The Wildcats'offense got on the board first after a scoreless first quarter as junior quarterback John Robarge connected with senior fullback Tim Moran for 26 yards and a touchdown with 5:40 remaining in the first half.

The first WHS score was set up by Dave Woods (offensive lineman of the week) who intercepted a pass (his first of two on the day) and returned it 24 yards to the Andover 26. The WHS offense went right to work as the first play after the Woods theft went for a touchdown when Moran made a nice grab for the score. Chris Briggs booted the conversion and the Wildcats led 7-0.

A poor Andover punt set up the second Wildcat score with 6:05 left to play in the third quarter. The kick gave Wilmington the ball at the Andover 27 and an eight playdrive was capped off when Moran banged in for a three yard touchdown. Briggs was again perfect on the point after for a 14-0 Wilmington lead.

ing as he grabbed a pair of Robarge passes good for 27 yards to spark the best WHS series of the afternoon. Robarge helped fuel the scoring drive with a nine yard scamper.

Andover quarterback Manny Silva looked completely recovered from a shoulder separation that kept him out of the Tewksbury game as after the ensuing kickoff he led his club on a drive that ended with a 16 yard TD pass to Ed Collins with 1:18 left in the #### third quarter.

Silva (20 for 32, 249 yards) completed five passes during this march, including an 18 yard connection with Manny Berger on a third and 15 situation that picked the series up off the floor for the Warriors.

The WHS offense stalled in the fourth quarter and the Warriors looked like they were finally going to put something together when after an exchange of punts they got the ball in excellent field position at the Wildcat 38.

Farnham took in an 18 yard pass before catching two more Silva passes to move the ball down to the Wilmington six. The Warriors stuck to the ground from that point with Silva capping the series with a one yard quarterback sneak for the touchdown. Silva booted the conversion that gave Andover a 14-14 tie in the fourth quarter.

The WHS defense hung tough and covered for a Chris Briggs fumble that was recovered by Andover's Ray Lynch at the WHS 20. The three man defensive front was solid on the ensuing Andover series, forcing Silva into a 33 yard field goal attempt that he missed with less than two minutes left in the game.

The WHS offense couldn't come up with the game winning drive late in the fourth quarter and the Golden Warriors took over at the Wilmington 45 and stagged the winning drive via the accustomed air route.

Silv connected on passes of 13 and 14 yards to Bill Lucey before being shaken up by a hard Wildcat pass rush on an incompletion later in the series.

Gillis' claim that his defense always had two or three people around the football was supported when junior reserve Walsh entered the game for the injured Silva and fired a pass into the endzone that Farnham caught for the game winner after winning an air battle with three Cat defenders. Silva kicked the conversion and the Wildcats had no time to mount a desperation drive as time ran out after the kickoff.

The defensive front played a solid game for Wilmington as Phil Russo (defensive lineman of the week) and sophomore Mike Russo were tough in the trenches as was tri-captain tackle Tom Carroll.

The Wildcats gained 221 yards total offense - 105 on the ground and 116 via the air. Robarge played another strong game with an eight for 16 passing day.

Saturday Wilmington plays host to the improved Methuen Rangers who upset Tewksbury 16-12 last week. The Rangers are unbeaten with a 2-0 mark after topping Central Catholic 24-16 and the slumping Redmen. Game time at WHS is 1:30.

Wingate, Wildcats blank St. John's

Goalie Steve Wingate recorded his second shutout of the season as the WHS soccer team won its first game with a 1-0 blanking of St. John's Prep Monday afternoon. The win snapped the Wildcats' winless streak at six games and improved their MVC soccer slate to 1-4-2.

Senior striker and co-captain John Connell scored the game's only goal when he pumped in a penalty shot. Wingate was his steady self in net with solid defensive support.

Wednesday (Sept. 27) the improved Chelmsford Lions handed the Wildcats a 2-0 blanking as MVC scoring leader Paul Clancy (nine goals, two assists-20 points) assisted on both goals

Bantam A's top Cambridge, Stoneham

Coaches Gordon and Mike Carlin's Bantam A's came up with two wins this past week. Thursday in the Wilmington League they defeated Cambridge 1-0 and Sunday in the Middlesex League Stoneham dropped a 6-1 game.

In Wilmington, goalies Bill Redler and Jeff Lux picked up their first shutout of the season.

It was dead even offensively before Donny Josephson scored at 8:07 of the third period with the assists going to Chuck McNeil and Darryl MacDonald. Ted Moran, Ron Greenberg, Ed Olson and George Boudreau helped preserve the 1-0 shutout.

Sunday in the Middlesex League Stoneham fell as Wilmington struck for two first period goals. Chuck McNeil scored at 7:33 and Bill Robinson at 6:14 with the assists going to Darryl MacDonald, Ron Greenberg and John Cushing.

At 10:24 of the second period Don Josephson made it 3-0 before Chuck McNeil found his range at 2:14. Josephson picked up his second goal of the period with 12 seconds left.

Assists went to Chuck McNeil and Darryl MacDonald with two each and Josephson with one, as Wilmington led 5-0 after two periods.

At 10:47 of the third stanza Stoneham made it 5-1 before Frank Newark scored at 1:03 with help from Greenberg to account for the 6-1 final. The A's missed defenseman Jim Conti who was in the hospital.

Squirt A's fall to Medford Saturday the A's broke their scoring draught, but still came out on the short end of a 5-1 score as they were defeated by a strong skating Medford team. Medford took a quick two goal lead, before the A's came back on the good forechecking led by John McLaughlin. Jeff Brennan later put Wilmington within one as he scored his first goal of the young season.

Despite some good defensive work and some excellent goal tending, Medford scored three unanswered goals to hand Wilmington a 5-1 setback.

The A's next see action on Friday (Oct. 6) at 9 p.m., when they journey to Burlington to take on Winchester.

The WHS defensive lineman of the week is fast becoming one of the most dependable receivers in the MVC after his six catches for 75 yards Saturday, including three spectactular grabs to fuel the WHS attack. Dave also turned in some excellent downfield blocking and was tough on the defensive side with two interceptions.

The son of Joseph and Mary Woods hopes to attend Boston College. His interests include foreign languages, baseball and basketball. The lanky Wildcat receiver lives at 191 Wildwood Street.

Phil Russo

The Wildcat tri-captain spearheaded a defense that limited Andover to nine rushing yards in 21 attempts Saturday. Phil made 10 unassisted tackles, had four assists on tackles and sacked Andover quarterbacks twice. He also caused a Golden Warrior fumble on Andover's first running play of the afternoon.

Phil hopes to attend Holy Cross and play for the improved Crusaders after graduation. His hobbies include all sports. Phil lives at 99 Chestnut Street with his parents Rico and Bernice Russo before Wilmington's Carl Borgeson broke the string with a fourth place finish in 13:54. Other Cat point getters were captain Kevin Cogan (14:23), John Mucci (14:35), Bill Cassidy (14:36) and soph Mike Stokes (14:45)

The Wilmington junior varsity dropped a 16-40 decision while the Methuen freshmen completed a Ranger sweep with a 17-39 win. The WHS girls cross country team had a tough time in a 15-50 loss to Methuen.

New Boilers - Baseboard Heat at Low, Low Costs The Wilmington edition of the Town Crier, last week, carried as part of a story about Route 93 and Route 129 a brief item saying that the state was planning to cut through what is called Wilmington Square. This would be a small part, of course, of the project which calls for a new bridge (Route 62) over the railroad, a new by-pass for Route 38 around Wilmington, and many things to be done to the railroad. It was back about the time of the Spanish American War, give or take a couple of years, that a new bridge was built over the railroad.

The original bridge had been a part of the old Boston & Lowell Railroad. When that railroad was laid down-1833-35, the planners wanted no grade crossings. They got no grade crossings, except in what is now Winchester Square, and what is now West Medford. In every other place a bridge was built over the railroad. Such a bridge was built over the railroad at Wilmington. It was about 14 feet above the tracks. The old Middlesex Canal was close by, passing beneath the street that is now called Burlington Avenue, so that there were two bridges relatively close together.

There was no Church Street in 1835. Church Street came about 20 years later, and is noteworthy in one way as being the first street in Wilmington that was laid out in a straight line. Perhaps, too, it was the first street to be laid out by a Civil Engineer or surveyor. Because the Boston & Lowell Railroad had a bridge, at what is now Burlington Avenue, in Wilmington, there had to be a way for wagons, and buggies, etc. to get up to that bridge level. So the ground was filled in, on both sides of the railroad. That was about 140 years ago.

The railroad station was located to the southeast of the bridge, in the area between the railroad and Main Street. Part of the area is now taken up by a huge electric transformer.

Because there was a bridge there, that railroad station shortly became a two level station. One could walk off the bridge, by a trestle or catwalk, from Burlington to the second story of the railroad station, which was a two/and one half story building.

Traditionally, there were, in addition to the usual signs about a railroad depot, another saying "West India Goods," and yet another saying "Tobacco." In other words the railroad station was also a general store. West India Goods was a nice genteel way of advertising rum.

That railroad station burned down just before the Spanish American War. Mrs. Daniel Buzzell, the wife of Dr. Buzzell, was one of the people who assisted in moving stuff out of the second story store, during the fire. Her maiden name, if the writer remembers correctly, was White.

Dr. and Mrs. Buzzell lived in what was known as the Blanchard House. That house was probably the first house to be built in what is now Wilmington Square. It probably was built by other than the members of the Blanchard family. That family, as the Wilmington Minutemen will relate, was descended from Sergeant Blanchard of the Wilmington Company of Minutemen, who marched and fought in Concord, on Concord Day. A Blanchard was Wilmington's first postmaster, and he had his office, which was probably very small, in his house, facing what is now Main Street. The Blanchard house was finally torn down to make room for the New England Telephone building, in Wilmington Square.

As a matter of record, there were no other buildings immediately in the area when the railroad came through, in 1835. The building where the American Traveller office is now was built about 1850, by a member of the Buck family and is today probably the oldest building in Wilmington Square. Others were built after that.

By the time the Boston & Maine got to building a new bridge, which was in the late 1890s there were quite a few buildings in the area that is now called Wilmington Square.

Schamiel MacIntosh owned several buildings, east of Church Street and along what is now Main Street. There are two still standing, on Main Street. His blacksmith shop faced on Church Street, and there were other buildings behind it.

Josie Ames owned several buildings on the other side of Church Street. One of them was a two story place, and had a hall upstairs, called, naturally, Ames Hall.

It was in that hall that the first Methodist services were held in Wilmington. Other things happened

Raising the Railroad

Ames Hall had to be moved, because of the new grade for Church Street. This photo shows it on its new brick foundation, and Church Street being graded. There are marks on the building from contact with a former porch. The person at left is Rudolph Porter, who was in charge of the Boston & Maine maintenance crew. "Dolph," as he was known, was almost always in a neat blue suit, and wearing a dapper derby, when he wasn't working on the railroad. This picture was taken from Schamiel MacIntosh's blacksmth shop.

Bridge in Wilmington

Another picture of Church Street, taken by Mildred Holt, and also from the blacksmith shop. Wagon wheels can be seen at right, near a flat surface, which could have been a wagon wheel stone, but perhaps wasn't. The stone shows up in another picture on these pages. The names of the men in the picture are not known.

The long building, at left, is a part of the Blanchard House. Beyond it, very dimly, can be seen the home of Mrs. Dr. Frances Hiller.

An Abbott and Doucette photo of Schamiel MacIntosh's places of business. Notice the mud of Church Street, being reconstructed. Main Street goes off to the right.

The first three buildings belonged to Schamiel, the second being his blacksmith shop. In front of the blacksmith shop is the stone shown in another picture. The fourth house down still stands, now the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gilbert. Across Main Street, and near the railroad station was a building which some Wilmington people will remember as the site of George's Restaurant. In those days it was Buck Brothers store. There were two, one in North Wilmington, run by Herbert Buck, and one in Wilmington run by George Buck.

Further down, near the place where the Wildcat Railroad branches off to go to Andover was a huge building, quite ramshackle, owned by the railroad, which was always referred to as "the tin shop."

About 1895 the Boston & Maine decided to raise the height of the Burlington Avenue bridge, from its 14 foot level to one of about 16 feet above the tracks. The writer has no records of the engineering involved. The heights are being guessed.

But it is known who the contractor was who hauled in the gravel for that job.

He was Herbert C. Barrows, then a young man about town. If the writer remembers correctly, it was in 1897 that he bought the farm that is now Avco, so that might be the year. He paid, incidently $700 for the farm.

Josie Ames owned a small hill, to the westward of where Sweetheart Plastics is now, and fairly close to Burlington Avenue. That hill was sold to a man named Michelinni, and he in turn sold it to Schamiel MacIntosh. Schamiel was the man, probably, who sold the gravel to the contractor who built the bridge, and Herb had several dump wagons at work, hauling that gravel over to the site.

It was about this time that a young lady named Mildred Holt began to take pictures, around Wilmington. Mildred was the daughter of the Postmaster, Milton Holt, and she became an expert photographer.

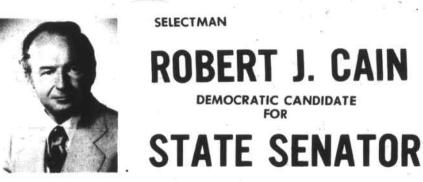

Some of her photos, are today the property of George M.A.M. Webber, and are reproduced here by permission. Other photos in this group were by Edward Abbott and J. Frank Doucette of Stoneham.

Taken together, as shown, the pictures give an idea of Wilmington Square about 1897, when the bridge was raised to its present level.

Now, shortly perhaps, there is to be a new Main Street, at its original level, if the engineers knew what they were talking about last week, and there will be a new bridge over the railroad, even higher than that which was built back about the time of the Spanish American War.

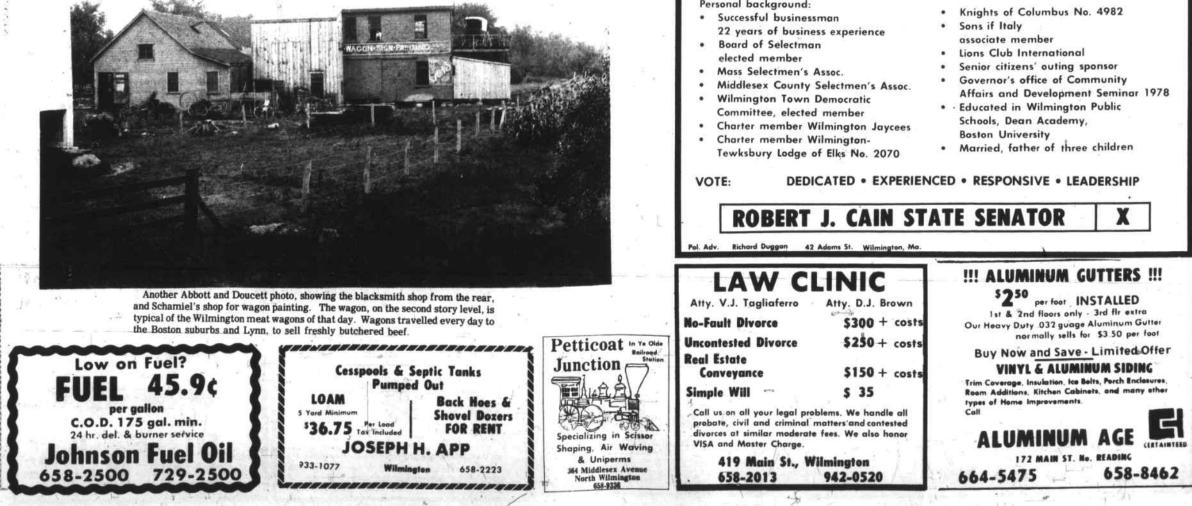

ELECT A STATE SENATOR WHO UNDERSTANDS THE PROBLEMS OF LOCAL GOVERNMENT AND THE NEED FOR HOMEOWNER TAX RELIEF...

Bob Cain has a program for responsible state government:

- Coordinate a senatorial effort to lower property taxes by working toward the elimination of excessive state spending. Steps to accomplish this goal must include the incorporation of good business practices into state government operations.
- Focus Senatorial attention on the reality of local government funding problems and work toward the elimination of unfunded state mandated projects.
- Initiate regular office hours within the district...
   listen and react to the will of the electorate.

Silent testimony, the vale was dry

Raymond Gracia of the Raymond Engineering Associates of Burlington quite possibly did not believe what he was hearing, last Thursday evening. He appeared in a hearing before the Wilmington Conservation Commission and was giving expert witness testimony as a civil engineer

The hearing, conducted in the Whitefield School, was being held because the Conservation Commission had issued a Cease & Desist order against John Cormier of Woburn Cormier is the owner of 20 to 30 acres of land off Aldrich Road, near Kendall Street. The Wilmington Planning Board, in 1972, approved plans for a housing development. A road had been put in (Houghton Road) but not finished, in accordance with those plans. The Town Engineer had approved the plans.

work done so far. Snow plow drivers, for the town, have frequently found a small lake to exist, on Aldrich Road, where Forest Street joins in. After they break down the snow bank on the west side of Aldrich Road, to drain away the water, it goes into the little vale or valley Other than the water from the snow, and water off Aldrich Road, there is little to cause a stream.

There were other subjects than the hundred year flood and future fertilizer pollution. The entire hearing took 99

The ConCom said much because they had not ap-proved the 1972 plans. Joseph Courtney, attorney, finally ended the discussion by asking that the ConCom write a letter, indicating what they wanted. He assured the commission of a reply The pine tree In the little vale or valley is a small area where grow some bullrishes. Nothing was said, during the hearing, of those bullrushes, but they constitute proof that there is water in that vale. In the middle of those bullrushes is a pine tree, a dead pine tree. It has been dead five or six years. Most of the branches are still intact. The tree was about 35 or 40 years old, when it died. Pine trees will not grow in water. That means that the nd was dry until half a dozen years ago. It was when Cormier put in Houghton Road, with the intention of later draining the water from that vale, that the small dam has made, and the pine tree

Serious as it might look, it's not a real emergency this time.

Science Director Richard DeRosa is demonstrating the proper technique for giving cardio-pumonaryresuscitation (CPR) to one of the several Woburn Street School teachers who are taking the science department's most recent course in this lifesaving skill. The victim is a stuffed mannikin especially designed for the instruction.

Special needs students will be more readily able to take part in intermediate school science programs because of a curriculum workshop held this summer by the Science Department of the Wilmington Public Schools. As a result of the workshop, which was held at the North Intermediate School, a special program of 35 mm slides and tapes was created to help solve major problems often encountered by special needs students in the science area. Approximately 200 original slides along with explanation tapes were developed. In addition, the entire seventh and eighth grade textbooks were completely recorded on tapes

Health Center needs volunteers The new Regional Health Center in Wilmington has asked that senior citizens be informed of its need for volunteers. Those interested in helping out could begin working as early as mid-October and may, arrange their hours for their own convenience.

Possible duties include helping patients to fill out applications, working within a child care center, and assisting various Health Center personnel. Those interested should call the Center at 657-7677 for more information.

Wilmington seniors Halloween party Halloween is rapidly approaching and, once again, the Council on Aging will hold its annual Halloween party on Wednesday, October 25 from 6:30 to 11 p.m. at the Knights of Columbus Hall in Wilmington.

The event will include dinner and dancing to the music of Terry Keon's three piece band and a Halloween costume contest.

Admission will be free to Wilmington seniors, but reservations must be made by all those wishing to attend. Call the center at 657-7595 for more information or to reserve tickets.
